Cluster is an open source web browser extension for Chrome, Firefox, and Opera. It is currently in alpha version 2, meaning you will be able to experience bugs, and its feature set could change before final release. What's inside: The extension is very simple, super fast, and easy to use, consisting of four parts: 1. Options & Preferences A gray space where you can configure the extension's behavior and appearance. Most of the options are pretty obvious, the ones that are not are mentioned in the options list. 2. Download Manager Where all your saved tabs are stored in the background. You can upload new files and folders into this space, as well as download files from them. 3. Import Manager Where you can import your saved addresses from CSV, or export them to CSV. 4. Search A gray space where you can search and filter your entire list of tabs, using keywords and domain, for the tabs you are interested in. The Benefits: 1. Index Cluster takes every window you have open in your browser, and stores the tabs in a list that represents every open page. That means you can now quickly access every tab you have open in every browser window. 2. Custom Filter As mentioned above, every tab can be filtered by a single domain or by keywords, based on the information saved in the options. These filters can be saved and loaded at any time. 3. Saves Cluster can also save the name and address of the pages you have visited. You can later move and switch those using the drag and drop function and the corresponding keyboard shortcuts. 4. Background Sync Cluster can now synchronize your saved addresses with other devices. If you want to access them from another device, you can import their file in the background, as well as download them, in the same way. The Documentation: The documentation is clearly written and it comes with in-depth help for all the features of the extension. An interesting feature is that you can add a tour of the documentation to your custom link bar. Where to get it: The extension is free and can be downloaded here. The current version is alpha 2, meaning the full feature set is not available. Preparation A) Install Open the extension in your browser and click the "Add to Chrome" button.
