Throwing Shade #22: John Rubinstein's New TV Show Welcome back to the Lovecraft Country podcast—we've been talking about Uber and our queer finery in podcastverse, but I'm still not ready to let go of horror. This week: John Rubinstein, co-writer of Kingdom of the Crystal Skull and new executive producer of AMC's new sitcom, Turn, joins us to discuss his job, the current state of Fantastic Four, and, of course, The Twilight Zone! Trailer for John Rubinstein's new show, Turn: About the Author Tara Redding is a writer and historian originally from New York. Her writing has appeared at Kill Your Darlings, The Rumpus, and The Wrap, and she holds a PhD in history from George Mason University. You can find more of her writing at her website, historicdrama.net. H.P. Lovecraft country is a new Lovecraft-themed pop-up shop and education center, opened by Nite Jewel Pictures in late October in West Hollywood. . Label Assistant 4.2Â .Q: Should I use an auto-increment field for creating an ID? I'm working on a database for an application that will be used by a large group of users, and I'm a little bit stuck on what to use for auto-incrementing IDs. Most of the answers I see on similar questions seem to encourage the use of auto-increment fields rather than simply making the ID a field in the entity. However, those answers all come from the perspective of a web application, and don't address the unique concerns of a database. What are the advantages and disadvantages of using auto-increment as opposed to simply declaring the id field as an int? A: You should use an autoincrement value for your ID field only if it is mandatory for your table. An ID field is just a simple field as anyone could create your table. But, why should you force your users to put an ID value if they want to create a new row? In such cases, you should use a separate table with autoincrement fields for the ID and your other columns. Genetic analysis of the egg-shell and shell membranes during egg formation in the domestic hen. By selective permeability of the egg-shell membranes to histological dyes the types of the egg-shell membranes were examined in the chicken. The outer perivitelline membrane was similar in all eggs, but the inner perivitelline membrane varied according to the type of the egg-shell membranes. The genes which control the morphology and composition of the egg-shell membranes are presumed to be located either in the egg-shell membrane itself or in the pre-ovarian tissues.Herman Keuschke Herman Keuschke (April 2, 1875 - December 31, 1945) was a German politician and president of the German Democratic Party in Bavaria. Keuschke was a staunch supporter of the Catholic Church. Keuschke joined the Bavarian People's Party, a predecessor of the Bavarian People's Party, in 1900. He became a member of the Reichstag in the Bavarian parliament in 1912 and was a representative for the Catholic State Party. From 1916, he was chairman of the Catholic Party. Keuschke was elected president of the Deutsche Volkspartei in Bavaria on January 26, 1922. He was re-elected on January 26
