A: read this Closing the Gap between Transplant Surgery and Tumor Burden: a Novel Application of Quality of Life Markers in Transplant Liver Cancer. Recurrent or residual cancer after liver transplantation (LT) continues to be associated with poor outcome. Primary objective of this study was to evaluate the prognostic importance of quality of life (QOL) markers in transplant liver cancer (TLC) patients. One hundred sixty-five TLC patients who underwent LT from January 2008 to December 2017 were included in the study. The TLC patients were categorized into three groups according to the Clavien-Dindo classification (CD), which is indicative of the severity of the complications. Clinical features such as patients' age, sex, body mass index, MELD (Model for End-Stage Liver Disease), donor type, graft type, tumor-free resection margin, Milan criteria, surgical margin, serum alpha-fetoprotein, and histology were analyzed. The most important factor of donor type was significantly associated with a higher incidence of CD2-3 patients (Fisher's exact test,  $p = 0.036$ ). High-quality tumor-free margin was significantly associated with a higher incidence of CD0-1 patients (Fisher's exact test,  $p = 0.002$ ). Routine liver biopsies should be performed in LT TLC patients with high tumor burden, high MELD score, and prolonged cold ischemia time. Liver transplantation should be considered in LT TLC patients with low tumor burden and high MELD score. Thanks you guys so much for the kind words of support in my absence. I'm not sure if anyone will notice my absence, since I'm so often there, but nonetheless, here's a quick snapshot of life before the WSoP sale. Like many of you, I'm certainly looking forward to the upcoming WSoP sale. I've now had the opportunity to check some items out in person, including dragons, which are so much fun. Here's an image of one of the large dragons that I snagged for a great price. This was one of the earlier sizes, but the later ones are equally awesome. I believe these were retailing for around $60 each c6a93da74d
